Poetry.

Love.

They sin who tell us love can die,
With life all other passions fly,
All others are but vanity.
In heaven ambition cannot dwell,
Nor avarice in the vaults of hell;
Earthly, these passions, are of earth,
They perish where they have their birth;
But love is undestructible.
Its holy flame forever burneth;
From heaven it came, to heaven returneth;
Too oft on earth a trouble guest,
At times deceived, at times oppress,
It here is tried and purified.
Then hath in heaven its perfect rest;
It sooths here with toil and care,
But the harvest time of Love is there.
O, when a mother meets on high
The babe she lost in infancy,
Hath she not then for pains and fears,
The days of woe, the watchful night,
For all her sorrows, all her tears,
An over-payment of delight.
[R. Southey.]

[From the Burlington Times.]
Horrible Murder in Hinesburgh.

Great excitement was occasioned in our city Sunday morning by the news that Mr. Perry Russell, a well known and wealthy farmer in Hinesburgh, had been murdered in cold blood the evening previous. In company with some fifty of our citizens we at once proceeded to the scene of the murder, which is in the north-western part of Hinesburgh, about nine miles from Burlington, five from Shelburn and two from Hinesburgh.

Mr. Russell was an aged man of 76 years, though in rugged health and quite vigorous. Himself and wife who was about his age, lived alone in a two story dwelling, but occasionally hired men to assist in working the farm. Both retired to rest about 8 o'clock Saturday evening—no one else being in the house. About half an hour afterwards some person knocked at the door of the dining room which opened to the north. Mr. Russell got up and went to the door, his wife telling him not to open it until she ascended who was there. Mr. Russell asked who was there, and received the reply, "Jo Bushy; I want to come in." He then unlocked the door, when as soon as it was opened he was felled by a blow from a hinge of a barn door, about 20 inches long and weighing three pounds. As he received the blow Mrs. Russell heard him say "Oh Lord!" She then sprang out of bed and came into the room, when she saw a shortish man with his back towards her pounding her husband on the head. Fearing for her own life she at once ran out of the back door and down the road to the nearest neighbor, Jerome Coleman, who lived a hundred rods south, and awoke him and his family. Unfortunately instead of at once returning to the house, they proceeded on and aroused the next neighbor, Daniel Walton, and afterwards Mr. Russell's son-in-law, N. R. Miles. All then went back to the house and found Mr. Russell lying in a pool of blood with head to the door, breathing heavily, and blood oozing out of a deep wound in the crown of his head. Drs. J. W. & J. E. Miles were at once sent for, but human aid was of no avail. He lingered on in an unconscious state until 10 a.m. yesterday, when he died. An examination showed the presence of 9 scalp wounds, from 14 to 3 inches in length, and a deep cut in the crown of the head. The skull was not fractured. Death undoubtedly resulted from the concussion of the brain and the exhaustion occasioned by great loss of blood. The murderer, after finishing his horrid work, evidently searched the house for booty, but obtained nothing except a small black trunk, which contained deeds, notes, and other valuable papers. This was found by Messrs. Edward Naramore, of Charlotte, and Luther Pierce, of Shelburn, yesterday, about half a mile from the house, on the farm of Orrin A. Morse, of Shelburn, broken open and the contents strewn about on the ground.

Mr. Russell had between $4,000 and $5,000 in U. S. 5-20 bonds; but had deposited them in the First National and Merchant's National Banks in this city, some time since. So the miserable man, like the Weathersfield murderer, got nothing by his awful crime.

In the same clothes-dress from which he took the trunk, hung the murdered man's pants, containing $125, but they seemed to have escaped his notice. Soon after the neighbors reached the house, Constable Andrew Currey, of Hinesburgh, was sent for. He immediately came to this city and awoke ex-Sheriff Flanagan, and they together proceeded to search the country for the murderer, visiting the railroad depots, ex-sex Junction, Shelburn, and other points where he would be likely to take the cars. The night was very light, the moon being up, and the early hour at which the murder was committed, gave ample time for the murderer to reach Shelburn depot, 4 miles distant (and whether there is a good footpath almost in a direct line) before the arrival of the night express train from Burlington, due at 10:15 p.m. The Charlotte depot is 54 miles from the scene of the murder.

No person has been arrested up to the hour we go to press, though Mr. Flanagan, Sheriff Munson, Deputy Sheriff Ashley, Chief of Police Drew, and other officers were active yesterday and all last night in endeavoring to arrest one Henry Welcome, of Hinesburgh, of whom there is strong suspicion. Welcome is a young man, about 19 years of age, and has just been released from Montpelier jail, where he had been confined for stealing a horse and buggy from Bruce & Ladd, of Waterbury, last summer.

He formerly had worked for Perry Russell and was familiar with the premises. His description as given to us by Sheriff Munson is as follows: Henry Welcome, French descent, 19 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches high, pale face, short dark hair, dark short sack coat, pants pepper and salt, light colored vest, calf boots with caps on toes, new fashion, Scotch cap, new style, red and black, with red band. Welcome was last seen on the Samuel Fletcher farm, about two
